Aarhus University Research Ethics Committee (Institutional Review Board)

The Aarhus University Research Ethics Committee hereby confirms that Danish law does not require ethical approval for projects that fall outside the scope of the Danish Act on Research Ethics Review of Health Research Projects and Health Data Research Projects.¹

Likewise, Aarhus University does not require researchers to obtain ethical approval from the Research Ethics Committee.

The ethical review offered by the Aarhus University Research Ethics Committee is a voluntary service to researchers employed at Aarhus University whose studies are not regulated by the regional health research ethics committees, but which may nevertheless need documented ethical approval for funding organisations or academic journals.

We can therefore confirm that ethical approval from the Research Ethics Committee at Aarhus University is required neither by law nor by the university.
